

PRESS RELEASE

HOFFMANN part of ZORGE

The Dutch family owned business Zorge Europe B.V. has acquired the German company Hoffmann GmbH, based in Kirchheim unter Teck near Stuttgart. This step follows the strategic partnership that both companies entered into in 2016.

ZORGE, with production sites in the Netherlands and Hungary, specializes in the production of rubber moulded and LSR silicone moulded parts. HOFFMANN focuses on the injection moulding of micro parts and multicomponent elastomer parts (see www.hofftech.com for more information).

Both companies focus on the supply of rubber precision parts to various sectors in the manufacturing industry worldwide and owe their ongoing success and growth to the further specialization in production techniques. The newly created ZORGE-HOFFMANN group has a total of 180 employees and an annual turnover of 21 million Euros.

Over the past five years, the companies have increasingly collaborated in various areas. After years of preparation, the final step in the transition is now a fact. The transfer of ownership was officially ratified in Kirchheim unter Teck on September 21st, 2021.

Against the background of the ongoing globalization of markets and changes in the manufacturing industry, this ownership transition lays a new and solid foundation for the continuity and realization of the growth ambitions of the individual production locations within the group.

All three production companies will continue to operate under their own company names and company management. The new management of Hoffmann GmbH consists of Dino Zorge (CEO), Jochen Kugler (CCO) and Andreas Neumann (COO).
